A Rich History Since 1908

The Royal Canadian Mint was originally established in 1908 as a branch of the Royal Mint of London, England[reference:5][reference:6]. On January 2, 1908, Lord Grey and his wife officially activated the presses, marking the opening of the Ottawa branch[reference:7]. The first coin produced was the 50-cent piece, struck in sterling silver[reference:8].

On December 1, 1931, an Act of Parliament established the Royal Canadian Mint as a branch of the Department of Finance[reference:9]. It became a Crown corporation on April 1, 1969 under the Royal Canadian Mint Act[reference:10][reference:11][reference:12]. Today, the Mint operates as a commercial enterprise, self-sufficient and reporting to Parliament through the Minister of Finance[reference:13].
